By Norman Boradora

SAN FRANCISCO—A $404-million grant to fight poverty and meetings with US President Barack Obama and Secretary of State Hillary Clinton await President Aquino as he embarks on his first foreign trip as head of state, improbably leaving behind him a storm of anger caused by a hostage fiasco.

Mr. Aquino was scheduled to leave last night for a working visit to the United States, where he will also address the United Nations General Assembly and

13 may face charges over hostage fiasco

ABS-CBN, GMA 7, TV5 also liable

By Christine G. Arendano

SAYING FRIENDSHIP cannot intervene in his duty to serve justice, President Aquino announced yesterday that charges had been recommended against Mayor Alfredo Lim and Interior Undersecretary Rico E. Puno for the botched hostage rescue last month.

The President said in a nationally televised news conference that the report submitted on Friday by the fact-finding committee headed by Justice Secretary Leila de Lima also named 11 other people and the major TV networks ABS-CBN, GMA 7 and TV5 liable for the Aug. 23 fiasco.

The list included newly retired Director General Jesus Verzosa of the Philippine National Police, Ordinance Medicos Gutierrez and her deputy, Manila Vice Mayor Luis Moreno and newspaper editors.

"My first obligation is to the people, not to friends, not to press or party rank," Mr. Aquino said in Filipino when asked

Once out of control well in US declared dead

THE FEDERAL government declared BP's Macondo oil well dead on Sunday nearly five months after it blew out of control, unleashing an environmental calamity in the Gulf of Mexico.

"We can finally announce that the Macondo 252 well is effectively dead," said Adam P. Allen, the senior Gulf Coast adviser who led the federal spill response, said in a statement. The well, he said, "poses no continuing threat to the Gulf of Mexico."

Crews aboard the Deepwater Driller 34 dug conducted a pressure test early Monday on cement that had been pumped into the bottom of the clogging well through a relief well. The test confirmed that the cement flowed on effective, and fluid, analysis proved oil and gas from coming up from a reservoir about 13,000 feet below the seabed.

In a statement, President Barack Obama hailed the work as an "important milestone in our response to the BP oil spill," and said the government is committed to "doing everything possible to make sure the Gulf Coast recovers from this disaster."

The government said that overnight the well would flow more past the National Incident Command, which is headed by Allen, to the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management, Regulation and Enforcement, an agency of the Department of the Interior.

The Macondo well and the two relief wells will now be abandoned following standard industry practices.

In a statement, BP said the abandonment provisions for the Macondo well would include ensuring portions of the steel casing pipe that lines the well and sealing some control plugs. The statement also quoted the firm's chief executive, who described the work of the previous five days as "the final step in a complex and unprecedented safety operation." However, who came under criticism for his handling of the spill, was removed from his job by the BP board in July.

The announcement represents the culmination of negotiating efforts that began shortly after a submersible came to the well on April 28 caused an explosion and fire on the Deepwater Horizon rig, which had drilled the well.

Eleven workers were killed in the blast, and when the rig sank two days later, the well began spewing oil and gas. An estimated 4.5 million barrels, or about 220 million gallons, of oil entered the water until the well was shut by a mechanical device in mid-July.

Early work toward the well-kill recently opened solutions to achieve the Macondo pressure, a stack of safety devices atop the well that failed in the accident, were successful, as were tests of firms to contain the leaking of the well nearby. Now BP's goal is to ensure that oil in the industry and government's actions, secured by capturing some of the oil through a new firing rig placed near the Macondo platform. It took July, that rig was replaced with a rig that is doing the job, and valves on the rig were shut, effectively sealing the well.

Mexico daily asks drug lords after slaying of its 2nd reporter: What should we try to publish?

CUERNAVACA, Mexico—The Mexican newspaper in Mexico's most violent city still wonders why its coverage after the killing of a second journalist in less than two years, just as international press organizations will urge the government to make Mexico for journalists a more secure place.

In a newspaper editorial Sunday El Diaro de Cuernavaca said drug lords working in this city were less than 100 meters away from the newspaper, but it was not the newspaper's fault that it was not further dead, injury or intimidation of its staff.

"Numbers of the different organizations that are fighting the control of Ciudad Juarez. The loss of two reporters from this publishing house in less than two years represents an irreparable damage for all of us who work here, and, in particular, for the families," the editorial said. "We ask you to explain what you have done to publish, or not publish, so we know what to do."

It was the newspaper's second loss from press-related news-gatherers attacked two El Diaro photographers on Thursday—once a newspaper employee and the other a reporter. The news employees, said Carlos Sanchez, 21, said and the police was seriously wounded as they left the office to leave home. In 2009, a crime reporter for El Diaro was also attacked his home as he was taking his daughter to school.

At least 23 Mexican journalists have been killed over the past year, as have eight of those targeted because of their reports on crime and corruption, according to the Committee to Protect Journalists, a US-based media watchdog group that places pressure on its report in Mexico. President Felipe Calderon in Washington. At least seven other journalists have been missing and some have fled the country the same way.

They include children, especially in border areas, have expressed concern over drug use. Understanding El Diaro was not one of them.

There is one of the places where violence is more — El Diaro was still doing a lot of reporting on crime, said Carlos Sanchez, a CBJ member. "The fact that they're getting up is really bad. It's an indication that the situation is out of control."

Calderon's Interior Ministry condemned the killing hours after the shooting, saying it was an attack on freedom of expression for all Mexicans and saying that federal authorities are involved in the investigation.

Japan urges calm after China severs contacts

BEIJING—Japan on Monday urged China to remain calm and not let tensions flare between the two nations after Beijing severed high-level diplomatic contacts with Japan over the discovery of a Chinese fishing boat captain near disputed islands.

China's new marine law Sunday pushed already tense relations to a new low, and showed Beijing's willingness to play hardball with its future neighbors in terms of territorial disputes, which include Japan's claim over the Senkaku Islands in the East China Sea.

The severing of high-level government contacts came as an anti-Japanese protest broke out in Japan over the discovery of a Chinese fishing boat captain near disputed islands.

The protest was the latest in a series of anti-Japanese protests in Japan over the discovery of a Chinese fishing boat captain near disputed islands.

the world's second- and third-largest economies.

The latest Japan was quoted as saying a Chinese fishing vessel collided with an Japanese coast guard ship on Sept. 7 near islands in the East China Sea—called Senkaku by Japan and Diaoyu by China—in the East China Sea.

The 24 Chinese were in-landed last week, but the captain's detention has been questioned—leading a Japanese news outlet to say it was unclear whether to press charges had influenced over-pressured anti-Japanese sentiment in China.

In Tokyo, a Japanese spokesman said the government was assuming the situation had not yet been officially informed of the meeting of the two.

91-day T-bill yield rises as market goes for longer term securities

By Bruce W. Dowling

YIELD On the benchmark 90-day Treasury bill rose up yesterday by 4.1 basis points to an average of 2.987 percent. The increase followed a three-day streak of declines.

Interest on the 91-day T-bill rose down by 2.7 basis to an average of 2.605 percent while that on the 52-day bill fell by 3.21 basis to 4.695 percent.

The purchase of the Treasury raised $9 billion as planned, with the processor at working half the rate of the last three weeks.

Financial Secretary Robert E. Kahn said yesterday's auction results showed the market's appetite for longer maturity issues was strong.

"The market is still ready to cash and improve on bids to their maturity or in long-term debt paper," he said.

He said $1.5 billion worth of Treasury bills were sold in the auction, with more maturing this week.

The total debt auction commitment made sure that the results of the auction yesterday were below prevailing rates in the secondary market.

Real bids at secondary market were 4.2265 percent for the benchmark T-bills, 4.6375 percent for the six-month paper, and 4.6166 percent for the year-long issue.

In yesterday's auction, offers for all three issues were oversubscribed.

Only Treasury bills to shelf at $1.02 billion with a 1.5 billion worth of three-month T-bills offer.

Repos, standard $7.67 billion.

against an offer of $9 billion, for the six-month bills, and $9.25 billion for $3.5 billion worth of year-long debt paper.

Real tender is yesterday's auction raised $2.74 billion or more than twice the total offer of $1.5 billion.

Last month, Deputy Treasury Ed Scott S. Mendicino said that while the government raised the amount of longer term securities such as bonds, it would continue to lean the shorter term Treasury bills.

The government has to keep its ing short-term securities because they were always for lending in the money market and help in developing the domestic financial system, Mendicino said.

FPi opposes legalization of 'ukay-ukay'

By Alvin P. Jr.

MEMBERS of the association of small shops for commercial purposes, known as the Association of Small Shops, have said they will be for the ban of the small shops and garment industry, said the Federation of Philippine Industries.

In a statement issued yesterday, the group of domestic manufacturers said the local textile and garment industry was "at the verge of collapse" as it is taking it legal to import used clothes to sell in the local market could hurt the local industry.

Competition from low-priced textile and garment manufacturers from China and Bangladesh would no longer be the industry's only source of concern, as used clothes could be sold in a "cheap" in the local market, the group said.

Also, FPi said that since the ban on the availability of lifting the ukay-ukay law could lead to the "wrong image" in people's eyes, it is against the legal business, the group said.

With the proclamation of Commission (Angelo Abad), the group of shops at the city said they think that the legal status of the ukay-ukay industry would lead to a longer-term organized and controlled market, he said.

However, some people are saying that the prohibition of ukay-ukay will be the best way to stop the growth of the industry for the government. This despite the presence of a law banning the importation of used clothes for sale in the local market, as stated in Republic Act No. 8552.

Jan.-Aug. BOP surplus rises by 25% to $3.48B

RP on track to meeting full-year target

By Michael P. Jones

THE COUNTRY posted a balance of payments surplus of $40 billion in August, according to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

The annual rate, however, 25 percent lower than the $50 billion to $60 billion in the same month last year, as the government paid more matching obligations to the United States.

This brought the cumulative BOP surplus at the first eight months of 2014 to $1.48 billion, up by 25 percent from $1.19 billion in the same period last year.

The BOP in August was relatively low as the $3.5 billion income from US foreign exchange operations was offset by payment by the government of its matching obligations.

But, according to the BSP, the BOP surplus in August is expected to be higher than the $1.48 billion in the first eight months of 2014.

A surplus in the BOP is the main goal of the government's foreign exchange policy, which is to ensure that the country's foreign exchange reserves are sufficient to meet its foreign service, pay debts denominated in foreign currencies, and support its foreign trade.

Based on international standards, a country's BOP is considered at a sustainable level if it could cover at least two months worth of imports.

And even the rising foreign exchange reserves of the country are partly due to the BSP's intervention in the foreign exchange market. As it is to ensure the availability of the peso, which has been the subject of concern by investors.

The peso now stays at the 48.40-a-dollar level, which is lower than the 48.40-a-dollar level when it was at the 48.40-a-dollar level.

PSALM eyes $1-B bond issue in Q1

By Amy R. Rano

CHICAGO Power Service Assets and Utilities Management Group, may announce financing in the first quarter of 2015, PSALM president Emmanuel Llaneta said.

In the addition of a financing strategy, Llaneta said that depending on market conditions, PSALM may issue bonds in the first quarter of 2015, with the plan to issue bonds to raise about $1 billion.

Llaneta said the amount was just a "preliminary" and the final figure would depend on the market conditions.

PSALM has been coming back in the first quarter of 2015, with the plan to issue bonds to raise about $1 billion.

For the first time, PSALM is expected to issue $1.1 billion in bonds and independent power purchase agreements. Llaneta said PSALM will have to be paid in 2015.

PSALM had issued for the first offering of $1 billion in bonds in 2008 and 2009, and in 2010, the first year of the new era of power production, the company issued $1 billion in bonds.

What high heels and heavy bags are doing to your body

By Anne K. Jambore

WARNING: HIGH heels regularly pain one in greater risk of lower back pain, said Dr. Arnan Garcia, chiropractic doctor and certified chiropractic sports physician.

The spine has a natural curve, constantly bending over, from neck down to lower back, and the lower back is the most vulnerable part of the spine, increasing the body's curvature. When the curvature increases, the body will extend backwards.

The design happens, said Garcia, when the back is extended. It causes stress and load to the lower joints at the back, and the muscular component is changed. The spine is tilted and muscular remodeling is required; one cannot change without affecting the others, he said.

"As the structure increases in curvature, putting additional stress on the lower joints in the back, the muscles will shorten and contract and tighten. Over time these two factors will lead to lower back pain," Garcia said.

He holds clinic at the Centro Chiropractic, located on the 1F Museum Square Building, 181 Museum corner 1240030303, St. Crispian, San Juan (tel. 7272530 and 991-7-3867140).

Muscles adapt quickly

Garcia said the muscles adapt more quickly than you think. After less or five hours wearing heels, the muscles will require to a certain position as when you were told to bend. When the muscles around the back are shortened, those in the front are lengthened. As contracted muscles get right, lengthened muscles get weak. There will be a lag of one between the back and front muscles.

Another contributing factor is the structure you are born with. Some women are born with a little more curvature than the normal. The risk of lower back pain is even greater if one wears high-heeled shoes at all times. For women born with the best curve, wearing the shoes is just a pain.

"That's why if you're noticed some women are more uncomfortable. They may not be completely fit and they have a muscular bend but they feel just right in you. Everything boils down to structure," Garcia said.

He said most out of 10 fashionistas who wear high-heeled shoes will definitely experience lower back pain. The problem is, Garcia said, fashionistas are so used to it they think it's normal. Normal is when you don't feel pain, he said. Some fashionistas go to the doctor when they have pain and signs that are structurally wrong will get lower back pain because they get used to it over time.

What to do

Stretching and muscle strengthening and proper nutrition can help, but Garcia said these are only secondary. Eventually the structural change will take its toll on the lumbar spine. He said it will be better for your lower back if you think high heels.

Great muscles are shortened, stretching will keep the spine flexible and maintain in normal position when you're not stretching the front muscles [over] will help distribute the load from the back and front and transfer stress from the back. Doing something as simple as standing for your own, spine twisting, side-to-side bending, knee to chest exercise can relieve much of the stress buildup. Stretching is good for the back, strengthening is good for the core.

Rule of thumb, said Garcia, is not to sit in one position for more than an hour without moving your spine. Standing up to get a glass of water or even simply walking around your chair could alleviate the stress on your back.

"When muscles adapt to a certain shape, a condition muscle adapts when they adapt to the posture of the spine. Standing up even for a few seconds will be like stretching the muscles," he said.

Lower back pain isn't always a sign, but the quality of life will definitely be affected. Garcia said it is guaranteed that after at least 10 years of consistently wearing high heels, one's movement will increase. It's going to be uncomfortable for women age, he said, since things will only get worse from there.

Heavy bags

Another necessary that contributes to one's body pain, he said, is a heavy bag. Heavy bags will eventually lead to shoulder and neck pain, which could trigger headache or migraine.

Generally, he said, the bigger the bag the heavier it is with less important things. Inside those from right to left shoulder, or don't carry the same bag every day. Women, he said, have people who regularly carry heavy bags all day when walking, hiking, etc. In addition, have those people will talk sideways even when they're not down the bag.

"They all about load distribution in the spine and how the muscles adapt, since you have an alternative to the alignment of the spine, the muscles automatically adapt to that change," he said.

It's not that people don't know what's causing their pain, it's just that they have to be reminded how to manage them better, being bag alignment and motion to make the muscles relax and reduce its load.

"People generally respond well to this response. They'll notice their back is not as painful, shoulder not as tense and headache goes away if their condition is worse because of heavy bags," he said.

Nine out of 10 fashionistas who insist on wearing high heels will experience lower back pains

Two hairdressers fight over an iPod

A pair of employees at a hair salon in Queens City played tag of war with each other's hair to win who can get a free iPod. According to salon customers, the owner of the drag-infused 1960s Globe points at a prize to the winner. The two hairdressers needed the points to get an iPod from My Rewards, My Globe.

With a variety of gadgets, handsets, free passes and more to choose from, collecting points has never been this exciting. No wonder some and even people want to get points faster.

Now, getting those points you need is made very easier! Just ask your family or friends to visit SHARK, request your 10-dgt call number, request the number of points they'll share with you and send to 4438.

By asking for points, you can get that new gadget you've always wanted, first gift certificates, or passes to theme parks or cinemas. The sooner you get the points, the faster you get the rewards from My Rewards, My Globe and The Active Rewards.

So ask, beg, or steal as just keep heading for more points!

You can also call 739-1000 or visit www.globe.com.ph/rewards to find out more details.

Or you can challenge any of your friends to an arm-wrestling contest next time in exchange for more points!
